Tony will be missed. His family and friends were important to him. He had life long friends I think he was lucky for that. He liked sports and keeping up to date on consumer reports. He loved to tell stories of things that he read, watched, or experienced. He would wear a baseball cap -- have a beer in one hand and a cigg in the other. He knew cars just not so much as to how to work on them. He liked his days off the work week. It was his relax time hardly ever alone. He was a helping person to many on his life journey. He would be the guy who would say say things are as they are but will get better. RIP
